HAYDEN. [Since the issue of our first edition, the Records of the Conn. Line of the Hayden Family has been published (1885) by JAMES HAYDEN, Esq., of W. Locks. In condensing from this for our present edition, we have been compelled by limitations of space imposed on us by the amount of Windsor material at our disposal to confine ourselves almost exclusively to the families of Windsor, Conn., Haydens, leaving the Hartington (Conn.) and western lines to refer to the fuller published Genealogy, above referred to. — H. R. S.]

William (prob. of a Somerset or Devonshire family; recent discoveries by Rev. Wm. B. H. of Portland, Me., furnish strong presumptive proof that he was a brother of John Hayden of Brintree, Mass., and both from Hinton Blewitt, Co. Somerset, Eng.) was of the Mary and John emigration to Dorchester, Mass., 1630; in 1631 was made a freeman at D. (evidence that he was also a memb. of the then D., now W., ch.); first appears in Conn. at Htfd., where he rec'd land in the first distribution, 1639; served under Capt. Mason (whose life he saved) at the Pequot Fight, 1637, for which he was granted a lot on the Soldiers' Field at Htfd., to which the Court after his death added 50 acres more for his heirs; the date (on W. Rec.) of birth of his s. Daniel, 2 Sept., 1640, prob. fixes date of his coming to W. (see, also, Old Ch. Rec.); sold his Htfd. prop. with dwelling-house thereon, 9 Feb., 1642/43; first bought at W. 24 Jan., 1644/45; and J. H. H. thinks it prob. that in the interim betw. these dates, he may have res. in the old Plymouth Co.'s Trading House at W., and that Daniel, the first American born Hayden, may have been b. therein, in the first house built in Conn. He bought of Mr. Francis Stiles 25½ acres, the site of his house being occupied now by the late Ezra Hayden homestead, east side highway, at junct. of two roads SE. of Hayden's Station.

On Sept. 2, 1885, the 245th birthday of Wm. Hayden's first-born s., Daniel, a large flint boulder, 5 by 3½ feet in size, was set as a memorial to mark the spot of Hayden's first dwelling (the site of the orig. house was abt. 13 rods SE. of the boulder and abt. 3 rods E. of the street). It bears, chiseled deeply upon its surface, the

* Rev. HORACE EDW. HAYDEN of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has in preparation a pedigree of this family.

Legend: "Memorial Stone." William Hayden, born in England -- Dorchester, Mass., 1630 -- Hartford, with the first settlers -- Windsor, 1640 -- settled here, 1645 -- removed to Homonoosett with first settlers; died there Sept. 27, 1699. Dedicated Sept. 2, 1885." The dedication was made the occasion of a great gathering of Haydens and H. descendants, and the address delivered by Jabez H. Hayden (to whom is due the credit of the Memorial boulder), was published on that day, under the title of "Sketch and Genealogy of the First Three Generations of the Connecticut Haydens," with a map showing the locality in which they settled": 8vo, pp. 20; map.

On that part of his farm lying west of the present R. R. station, Wm. H. had a stone quarry, worked as early as 1654, and then called his "lot where his stone pit is"; but his principal occupation was that of farmer. He was one of the first Troop of Horse in the colony, 1657/8. His wife d. 1664 (O. C. R.), and in 1665 he rem. with the first settlers to Homonoosett (Clinton, Conn.), abt. which time he m. (2) Margaret (wid. of Wm.) Wilcockson of Stratford, Conn.; 1667, he was one of the deputies from Town of Kenilworth (Killingworth, Conn.); one of three petitioners for authority to organize a church there, and his name is third on its roll of members. Aug. 12, 1669 (see Jessup Gen.), he was app. one of four com'rs to divide ld. betw. Ed. Jessup and John Richardson, which the latter had bought of the Indians in Westchester, near N. Y.; Sept. 27, 1669, he d. Kenilworth, Conn., deeding all his W. land to his eldest s. Daniel, who had not left the old homestead. Children (b. W. -- O. C. R.):

Thos. Hayden

"Lieut. Thomas Hayden's father was unfortunate in his second marriage. Having no issue, this second wife lavished his property on her two sons by a former marriage, and set them up in business with their step-father's money. In 1760 her husband, Daniel Hayden, engaged, with another person, to furnish the British Government with a large quantity of timber; but, owing to his partner's dishonesty, he lost so heavily by the venture that he was forced into insolvency. This threw his sons entirely on their own resources.

"Lieut. Thomas, when his school days were ended, learned the trade of a carpenter, and became an architect and builder, occupations which, in those days, were not separated. Two of the houses, built and owned by him, two hundred years ago, still stand, admirable and substantial monuments of his ability. One, located on Palisado Green, Windsor, is now owned and occupied by his granddaughter, Mrs. Gen. Ambrose Fowler. Mr. Hayden also owned and cultivated his paternal farm at Hayden's. But he was not permitted to spend his entire life in peaceful pursuits. When the clash of arms occurred at Lexington, April 19, 1775, he promptly rode express, carrying the news to Spittfeld (see p. 311, Vol. I.), and was one of the Lexington Alarm party which left Windsor, under command of his cousin, Capt. Nathaniel Hayden. He served until July 17, 1775, when he became Sgt. in the Simsbury Co., commanded by his brother-in-law, Capt. Ebenezer Fitch Bissell. His reputation as a soldier led to his selection as superintendent, in part, of the fortifications erected at Roxbury, Mass., during the siege of Boston. Before this, the attention of his colonel had been attracted by his diligence as a soldier, and promotion soon followed; he was app. Sgt.-Major in 8th Continental Reg't (Col. Jedediah Huntington), Aug. 11, '75; 2d Lieut. in Capt. Hubbard's Co., 17th Reg't Foot, Col. Huntington, Jan. 1, '76, commis. signed by John Hancock; Adjutant of same Reg't, Oct. 20, '76; was recommended for promotion and made 1st Lieut. in Col. Wylls's Reg't, 1 Jan., '77; was Adj't to Col. Zebulon Butler, in command of Conn. troops at Danbury, Apl. 8, '77. In Aug., '77, was on recruiting service at Windsor, for Capt. Ell's Co., Col. Wylls's Reg't, then at Peekskill; took the Oath of Allegiance and was discharged, at his own request, Apl. 25, '78. This was probably done at great sacrifice of pride and devotion to his country. But the occasion justified his action. It was taken at the most trying period in the history of Connecticut during the Revolution. In that colony silver money was not to be had, and continental scrip was worthless. When he entered the army he left at home his wife and five young children, the eldest then just 6 years old, and with no male person on the place to work the farm. An absence of three years in the field was not calculated to improve his estate; and the worthlessness of the paper money made his pay of little value to his family. With it his wife found it quite impossible to buy even the necessaries of life for herself and children, all of whom were ill. She rode miles on horseback to procure meal or flour for bread, and, failing in this, she sent for her husband to come home to his sick and needy family, which summons he obeyed by resigning his commission. By the proclamation of Gov. Trumbull, June 20, '82, calling for 18 companies of 96 men each for the Continental Army, Lieut. Hayden was again commis. first Lieut. of Capt. John Francis's Co., 1st Conn. Reg't, Lieut. Col. Hezekiah Sabin, Jr. His service, like that of the entire army, was virtually ended by the surrender of Cornwallis, Oct. 19, '82. During the following year he was enabled, by the Declaration of Peace, to return to his home and spend the rest of his days in tranquility. The writer of this sketch still owns five of his eight commissions, the handsome sword, the watch, inkstand, and Order Book used by Lieut. Hayden in the Revol. War."

Lieut. Hayden, we are told by aged Windsor people, "was a tall man and fine-looking; but his wife was small in stature and weight, with a sweet face and most lovely disposition. She was always spoken of as an excellent wife, a kind neighbor, and in every way an estimable woman." In 1777, "Abigail, wife of Thomas Hayden, was adm. to the W. ch., under the Half-Way Covenant."—No. Ch. Soc. Rec., 1767-94. Children:

FAM. 30. Horace H.¹ (M.D.) (Sgt. Thos,² Dan,³ Dan,⁴ Dan,⁵ Wm,⁶), b. Hayden's, W., 13 Oct., 1769. [The following biog. is from the pen of Rev. HORACE EDWARD HAYDEN of Wilkesbarre, Pa.]; bp. "in the mother's right," 29 June, 1777, in W. ch. He was remarkable from his childhood. Rev. Thos. E. Bond, D.D., LL.D., in an address before the students of the Dental College of Baltimore, and published in the Balt. Dental Journal, 1844, says, "he learned to read almost as soon as he did to talk, and at once contracted that fondness for books which was so remarkable in all his subsequent life. . . . Such was his industry and systematic application that, at the age of four years he had read the Bible regularly through, and from early childhood to the day of his death the Bible was his favorite book, and he was always a thorough student of the Word of God. While a boy he also manifested a remarkable fondness for natural history, and frequently surprised his friends by the ingenuity and success with which he discovered objects of interest, while rambling through the fields and woods, a propensity remarkably exhibited in his after-life. At ten years of age he began the study of the classics, but, probably from want of means, soon abandoned it; but, at the age of 14, in the humble capacity of cabin-boy of a fine brig, he had the happiness of making two voyages to the West Indies, returning with renewed zest to his studies both of books and of natural objects. Obligated, by his circumstances, to leave school at the age of 16 and provide for his own maintenance, he became apprentice to an architect; and, although it was not exactly what suited his tastes, he pursued his practical studies in this department of art with most commendable zeal and industry; and when, soon after coming of age (1790), he sought at Point Petre, Guadaloupe, in the West Indies, employment in his business, he succeeded very well, until compelled by the periodical fever to return to America. The next year brought him a similar experience; and thereafter, for several years, he pursued his vocation in Connecticut, and subsequently in New York; during the winter of 1798 becoming the first teacher of the 1st North School District of Hartford.

About this time, however, he had occasion to call for professional work upon Dr. Greenwood, who had been Gen. Washington's dentist, and who was then the only regular dentist in the United States. During this interview he suddenly conceived the idea of devoting himself to dental surgery. Bidding farewell to architecture, and obtaining such information as he could from Dr. Greenwood's few books upon the subject, and from his instructions, he went, in 1801, to Baltimore, Md., without friends, and almost without money, and but imperfectly acquainted with his newly-chosen art. Dentistry was then but little introduced or practiced, and had little claim to be considered a science. To a man of Hayden's quickness and industry, it was a small thing to equal the best operators of the day. He aimed to do more—to elevate the employment to a parallel with his own abilities. With this view, he attended the Medical School of the Univ. of Md., and studied anatomy and medicine so eagerly and fully that, though he did not graduate in medicine, he acquired such extensive knowledge in these departments of science, as to gain for himself the respect and confidence of the medical profession, and fully entitled him to the honorary degree conferred on him, in later life, by the Jefferson College of Philadelphia, and by the University of Md., each of which institutions granted, without application on his part, the honorary degree of Doctor of Medicine. So respectable was his knowledge of surgery considered, as early as 1812, that, during the attack of the British upon Baltimore in 1814, his services were put in requisition as surgeon, and his kindness and skill were fully employed in caring for the wounded.

Rising rapidly in the public confidence, he also won the respect and intimacy of the medical profession of Maryland, and in 1809 was invited to read a course of lectures on Dentistry, before the Medical class of the Univ. of Maryland—an honor never before, or since, conferred upon a practitioner of dentistry. In 1810 he was a member of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculties of Maryland, among whose duties was that of examining and licensing for the practice of medicine in that State. He was also a valuable contributor to medical journals on matters surgical and dental. Next to Pathology and Physiology, his favorite study was Geology. Indeed, in 1780, when only 12 years old, he had witnessed and noted the effect of a great ice-flood in the Conn. River, by which the surrounding country was overflowed, and large masses of rock floated in ice-cakes to the meadows of the valley; and, in 1809, almost at the beginning of his practice in B., he investigated the mineralogical and geological character of that vicinity, and, at request of its editor, pub. in the Balt. Med. and Philos. Lyceum (1810) a "Geological Sketch of Baltimore," in part subsequently reprinted in Silliman's Journal (1833), and referred to by Professor J. P. Lesley, in his Geol. Survey of Penn., as "a model of careful description and accurate field-work." It was near B. that he discovered that form of Chabazite to which Prof. Silliman gave the name of "Haydenite."

Dr. Hayden was no scientific unbeliever; he believed firmly in Nature's God, His Word, and His Revealed Religion. He was proud of his profession, and early saw the necessity of an association of its respectable members for purposes of mutual encouragement and common effort. He took a prominent part in the formation of the "American Society of Dental Surgeons," of which, in 1838, he was elected president; and he wrote largely for its published organ, The American Jour- nial and Library of Dental Science. To his labors as an instructor of office-students, and as a lecturer to a night-class, in a hired building, for many years, may be largely attributed the formation, in B., of the Dental College which was opened in 1840, of which he was first president and Prof. of Dental Path. and Physiology. The old line of the ancient writer, "Nil actum credens dum quid superesset agendum," might well be applied to Dr. Hayden. He reckoned nothing done while anything remained undone. Hence, to the very end of his life, he was ever active, looking upon acquisition as but preparatory to requirement, and delighting in effort rather than in possession.

Dr. Hayden inherited his father's military spirit, and when the British landed at North Point, Md., in 1814, as soon as Maryland called her citizens to her defense, he enlisted as a private in Capt. Thos. Warner's Co., 39th Reg't, Md. Mil., of which Co. he was at once app. first. sgt., serving as such at North Point and at Fort M'Henry. After the action which resulted in the repulse of the British, he was app. acting surgeon by General Smith, and served in the hospitals. He was a versatile writer, as his numerous published papers on Dentistry, Geological and Mineralogical subjects, Intonation, Silk Cocoons, Pathology, etc., testify. He obtained in 1823, a patent for the application of pyroligneous acid and oil to the tanning of leather; also for preventing dental decay; and the very valuable collection of minerals which he left at his death became the basis of the extensive cabinet now owned by Roanoke College, Va. He was a member of Am. Society of Surgeon Dentists; Cor. Sec. Balto. Physical Assoc., 1819 (now Md. Acad. of Science); member of Am. Geol. Soc. (now Am. Assoc. for the Advance of Science); memb. Md. Med. and Chir. Faculty; corr. memb. Acad. Nat. Science, Phila., Pa.; of West. Acad. Nat. Science; hon. memb. Med. Soc. Balt.; of Med. Soc. Orange Co., N. Y.; of Western Museum Soc.; and, in 1843, the Royal Society of Northern Antiquaries, Copenhagen, Denmark, requested his acceptance of a Fellowship in that Soc.—an honor of which death prevented his acceptance.*
